World Federalist Movement [WFM] [www.wfm-igp.org] is the main and original organization established in 1945 that supports the global federalist mission. The organization is headquartered in New York City and has a great many allied national organizations throughout the world. The Institute for Global Policy [IGP] – est. 1983 – is the policy/academic/education center supporting the WFM mission. Joseph Schwartzberg's comprehensive reform recommendations for the UN are associated with the IGP. UN reform is a focal concern of the WFM. There are many sources of information on the federalist movement that are available through the website of these two main, allied organizations. There are also many different ways to support the mission and different options for levels of involvement starting with individual membership. There are several subgroups within the WFM that focus on particular global issues, including equality, environment, security and peace, etc.; so, there are options to support efforts to deal with specific global challenges within the united effort of the WFM to address the entire complex of these issues from a federalist perspective.

Citizens for Global Solutions [www.globalsolutions.org] is the main organization in the United States promoting the WFM mission. This organization's website is a good source of information on the global federalist movement in general as well as efforts to promote the federalist cause in the U.S. The website identifies many resources on the federalist topic, including an online course and several books written by authors from a variety of nations. There are options for various levels of participation and involvement in this organization. For Americans, this is the most relevant national level federalist group, established in 1947.

Democratic World Federalists [www.dwfed.org] is an organization supporting the global federalist cause that is located in San Francisco. United Nations reform is the focus of this group, established in 2004.

World Federalist Movement – Canada [www.wfmcanada.org] is the Canadian organization supporting the WFM mission. It is the Canadian version of the Citizens for Global Solutions group in the U.S. Its website offers many resource, involvement and activity options.

Parliamentarians for Global Action [www.pgaction.org] is an international organization whose members are representatives to the legislatures of their various nations and who support the issues that are of concern to global federalists without calling specifically for UN reform.
